

Evolution of Dialysis in the United Kingdom 1956 to 2006

At the RA-BRS Conference in Harrogate in 2006, this remarkable presentation was made to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the introduction of dialysis for acute renal failure (as it was then known) at Leeds General Infirmary.

Introduced by Aleck Brownjohn, the speakers were Stewart Cameron and Nick Hoenich, two world authorities on the development of dialysis, especially in the UK.

Unfortunately a recording was not made at the time, but happily they accepted our invitation to come to Brighton for the 2007 RA Conference, and there they gave their presentations again to camera.

It is a fascinating and informative story which they told. Click here to view video.
